sisted that Davenport had seventy-two years.

The little Postmaster next turned to an attack upon the proposition of Davenport that he must have room for his valuable records. He said:

"A brief examination by this Court would show that those alleged valuable records are now scattered and heaped up covered with cobwebs and dust, all over the rooms, and that they could be cared for in one-twestich of the space now wasted on them.

Commissioner Deuel replied to Postmaster Dayton, He deglared that an officer of the court had been assaulted in his rights, the records of the court had been taken away from him and he had been taken away from him and he had been taken away from him and he had been denied access to them.

"The custodian of the building (Mr. Dayton) shows a familiarity with the records and books of the Chief Supervisor of Elections which he clearly has no right to," concluded Mr. Deuel, "and if is clearly in contempt of court." Judge Lacombe took the papers, reserving his decision.
